The Plain Dealer poll released Sunday showed some sharp differences between men, who more often held conservative views, and women. It also revealed that men are far more enthusiastic about this year's election, which also bodes well for Republicans.

One detail from the article is that a Plain Dealer poll showed that male voters have more conservative views than women voters. This is significant because it shows that men will likely support Republicans. Another detail from the article is that men are "more enthusiastic about this year's election." This is significant because it shows that more men will probably vote.
