5. Ms. Meeks' attitude about school and learning is very positive. For example, she puts on a conductor's cap and says, "all aboard the learning train." Donald's attitude toward his teacher and school is also very positive. For example, when Ms. Meeks invites her students to get on the learning train, Donald jumps to his feet and "bellows 'Yahoo!'"

11. One example of Zinkoff's kindness is when he searches for the missing girl in a snow storm, risking his life. He never considers the danger of this action, because he is a selfless person. Later, he comes to learn that the girl was found shortly after she went missing, yet he kept looking for most of the night, never expecting any kind of reward or congratulations.

13. (friend choice) If Zinkoff were in my class, I would be his friend, because he is a kind and funny kid. Qualities that make him a good friend are his ability to laugh at almost anything and how he can take all of the abuse that his peers give him.

13. (not friend choice) If Zinkoff were in my class, I would not be his friend, because he has many annoying ways about him. Qualities that make him a bad friend are his constant laughing at silly things and his talking out, which would disrupt my learning. Plus, he is not athletic, and I hang with the athletes.
